Desperados were a pioneering country rock band that helped to define the genre in the 1970s. The band was formed in Los Angeles in 1971 by singer-songwriter Don Henley, guitarist Glenn Frey, bassist Randy Meisner, and drummer Don Felder. Desperados' self-titled debut album was released in 1973 and featured the hit singles "Tequila Sunrise" and "Doolin-Dalton."

Desperados' music was a blend of country, rock, and folk influences. The band's songs were often about outlaws, cowboys, and other characters from the American West. Desperados' music was also known for its strong harmonies and catchy melodies.

Desperados were one of the most popular country rock bands of the 1970s. The band toured extensively and released a number of successful albums, including Desperado (1973), Desperados 1975 (1975), and Hotel California

(1976). Desperados' music has been covered by a number of artists, including the Eagles, Linda Ronstadt, and the Byrds.

Desperados broke up in 1982, but the band's music continues to be popular today. Desperados were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2007.

The Band

Desperados were formed in Los Angeles in 1971 by singer-songwriter Don Henley, guitarist Glenn Frey, bassist Randy Meisner, and drummer Don Felder. Henley and Frey had previously been members of the country rock band the Eagles, but they left the band in 1971 to form Desperados.

Meisner had also been a member of the Eagles, and Felder had played with the band Poco. Desperados' lineup was completed by keyboardist Bernie Leadon, who had previously played with the Flying Burrito Brothers.
