Orcas, also known as killer whales, are one of the most iconic and fascinating animals on the planet. They are incredibly intelligent, social creatures that have a complex and fascinating culture. However, orcas are also facing a number of serious threats, including pollution, habitat loss, and climate change.

One of the most pressing threats to orcas is the practice of farming them for entertainment. Orcas are captured from the wild and then kept in captivity in marine parks, where they are forced to perform tricks for paying audiences. This practice is cruel and inhumane, and it has a devastating impact on the physical and mental health of orcas.

In this podcast, we will talk to experts about the issue of farmed orcas. We will explore the history of orca captivity, the impact of farming on orcas, and the growing movement to end this cruel practice.

Episode 1: The History of Orca Captivity

In the first episode of Farmed Out, we will take a look at the history of orca captivity. We will learn about the first orcas to be captured and put on display, and we will trace the development of the marine park industry.

We will also talk to experts about the impact of captivity on orcas. We will learn about the physical and mental health problems that orcas in captivity often suffer from, and we will discuss the ethical concerns surrounding the practice of keeping orcas in captivity.

Episode 2: The Impact of Farming on Orcas

In the second episode of Farmed Out, we will take a closer look at the impact of farming on orcas. We will talk to experts about the physical and mental health problems that farmed orcas often suffer from, and we will discuss the social and behavioral problems that can develop in orcas who are kept in captivity.

We will also talk to activists who are working to end the practice of farming orcas. We will learn about the challenges they face, and we will discuss the progress that has been made in recent years.

Episode 3: The Growing Movement to End Orca Captivity

In the third episode of Farmed Out, we will talk to activists who are working to end the practice of orca captivity. We will learn about the challenges they face, and we will discuss the progress that has been made in recent years.

We will also talk about what you can do to help end orca captivity. We will provide you with information on how to contact your elected officials, how to donate to organizations that are working to end orca captivity, and how to spread the word about this important issue.

If you are concerned about the welfare of orcas, we encourage you to listen to Farmed Out. This podcast will provide you with the information you need to make informed decisions about this important issue.
