Yamie Chess is a princess in disguise. She is a woman who has defied the odds to become a successful entrepreneur and philanthropist. Her story is one of resilience, determination, and hope.

Yamie was born in a small village in Cameroon. Her father was a chief and her mother was a farmer. Yamie was raised in a traditional African household, where women were expected to stay at home and care for the children. But Yamie had dreams of her own. She wanted to go to school and get an education.

When Yamie was 16 years old, she left her village and moved to the city of Yaoundé. She enrolled in a local university, where she studied business administration. After graduating, Yamie started her own business. She opened a small shop that sold clothes and accessories.

Yamie's business was successful, but she knew that she could do more. She wanted to make a difference in the world. So, she started a non-profit organization that provides scholarships to young women in Cameroon. Yamie's organization has helped hundreds of women get an education and improve their lives.

In 2016, Yamie was crowned Miss Cameroon. She used her platform to raise awareness about the importance of education for girls. She also spoke out against gender-based violence and other forms of discrimination.
