The company was founded in 2005 by Japanese dancer and choreographer Kenzo Kusuda. Kusuda was trained in traditional Japanese dance forms, but he was also interested in exploring contemporary movement. He founded The Rebels of New Sun to create a new form of dance that would blend the two.

The company's dancers are all highly trained in both traditional Japanese dance and contemporary movement. They use their skills to create performances that are both visually beautiful and emotionally resonant. The company's repertoire includes both traditional Japanese dances and new works that explore contemporary themes.

The Rebels of New Sun have performed all over the world, and their work has been praised by critics and audiences alike. The company has been featured in major dance festivals and has received numerous awards. In 2015, the company was awarded the prestigious Bessie Award for Outstanding Production.

The Rebels of New Sun are more than just a dance company. They are a group of artists who are passionate about exploring the nature of time and tradition. Their work challenges audiences to think about the ways in which the past and the present are connected, and how tradition can be used to create something new.

The Nature of Time

The Rebels of New Sun's work is often about the nature of time. In their performances, they explore the ways in which the past, present, and future are connected. They use movement to create a sense of timelessness, and they often incorporate elements of traditional Japanese dance into their work to connect with the past.

In their work, The Rebels of New Sun also explore the ways in which time can be manipulated. They use slow motion and fast motion to create different effects, and they often use repetition to create a sense of timelessness. Their work is a reminder that time is not a linear construct, but rather a fluid and malleable thing.

The Nature of Tradition

The Rebels of New Sun are also interested in the nature of tradition. They use traditional Japanese dance forms in their work, but they also challenge traditional notions of what dance is. They believe that tradition is not something that should be blindly followed, but rather something that should be questioned and reinterpreted.

In their work, The Rebels of New Sun use traditional Japanese dance forms to explore contemporary themes. They use traditional movements to create new meanings, and they often juxtapose traditional and contemporary elements to create a sense of tension and conflict.

The Rebels of New Sun's work is a reminder that tradition is not static, but rather a living and breathing thing. It is something that is constantly being reinterpreted and recreated, and it is something that can be used to create something new.

The Future

The Rebels of New Sun are a company that is constantly evolving. They are always looking for new ways to explore the nature of time and tradition. Their work is a reminder that the past and the present are always connected, and that tradition can be used to create something new.

The Rebels of New Sun are a company that is poised to make a major impact on the world of dance. Their work is innovative, thought-provoking, and emotionally resonant. They are a company that is sure to continue to challenge audiences and push the boundaries of dance.
